Most Enthusiastic Convention Ever Held in Red Deer

E. MICHENER Unanimously Nominated

The Conservative Convention on Saturday last ought to be an eye opener to all who are interested in the political situation in this riding. There has never been the life of it in the Red Deer district.

The delegates present numbered exactly one hundred and forty, representing all parts of the riding. Owing to changes in trains from the west several delegates were unavoidably prevented from being present.

There was, of course, only one name placed in nomination, and that the name of the honored leader of the Conservative party of the province, Edward Michener. Nominations were immediately closed, and amid wild scenes of enthusiasm, and round after round of cheers, Mr. Michener was acclaimed the choice of the convention.

The spontaneous nature of the enthusiasm and its lusty volume showed better than anything else how thoroughly Mr. Michener holds the loyalty and confidence of his party.

At the last convention, at which Mr. Michener was nominated, there were present not more than one third the number present Saturday, and it would seem that this is about the exact proportion between the support then obtained by Mr. Michener and what may be expected at the coming election.

The convention was addressed by Mr. Michener in a splendid speech of two hours' duration, which was listened to with close attention by the large and enthusiastic convention. Mr. Michener reviewed the political situation in detail, and referred to a number of local matters affecting his own riding. He particularly pointed out that should he carry the country he proposed to have a commission appointed to study and report upon the water power possibilities of the province with a view to harnessing them to meet the industrial needs and possibilities of the province in all parts, so that there might be cheap power available for the encouragement of all forms of manufacturing and industrial enterprise.

Referring to the changes made in the riding to the west by which the boundaries have been carried across the North Saskatchewan and west 12 miles, and also north along the boundaries of Lacombe, taking a strip from the old Stony Plain riding, where there are at present some hundreds of men engaged in railway construction work on the C.N.R. Mr. Michener charged the government with a deliberate machine trick to secure his defeat. The candidate announced that he had been offered a seat in one of the cities, which he had declined, preferring to be the member for Red Deer than to represent any other riding in the province. This statement was greeted with a round of cheers. There were a number of ladies present, which Mr. Michener took to forebode a time when they too would take part in the election of representatives to Parliament. That many are in some degree of sympathy with the Conservative party, was evident from the way this remark was received by the audience.

Mr. Michener showed up the methods of concealment practiced by the present government, even in small matters of detail. He referred to the fact that while information in the public interest with regard to the amount spent on roads was refused, the Liberal candidate had stated that he had been informed by the Minister of Public Works that it was some $2,000. In answer to a direct question on the floor of the House, the Minister of Public Works had denied ever having given such information to Mr. Welliver, and had stated in answer to the question, "Then if Mr. Welliver says that you did inform him, he is saying what is not so," had replied "absolutely." It is understood that Mr. Welliver is still repeating the statement that the Minister told him this was the amount spent, and is also stating that Mr. Michener did not believe the replies on the floor of the House. That statement is also "absolutely" false.

If it were a fact that the books of the Public Works Department showed the amount mentioned to have been spent, there was a still more serious condition of affairs, for the money most certainly had not been expended in the improvement of the roads, a fact plainly evident to the farmers who have to travel them. If the amount is correct, then perhaps Mr. Welliver can account for the spending elsewhere of the difference.

Mr. Michener referred to the fact that while the House had been in session, and the members of the Conservative party busy with the business of the province, the ridings of Conservatives had been overrun with heeled and hiredlings of government, some of whom paid by the money of the people of this province. In order to secure a fair chance for the people to consider the issues on which the election ought to be fought out, it had been moved by Mr. Michener that election writs should not issue until thirty clear days after the dissolution of the Legislature, thus giving 30 days, then 16 days clear from the issue of writs of election to the day of nomination, and then 7 clear days to the holding of an election, 53 clear days in all.

This fair amendment had been introduced by the Premier and voted down by a straight party vote.

The Redistribution Bill was a glaring example of this principle. The city of Calgary had been divided into three ridings, in which candidates were to be elected separately. While the city of Edmonton had not so been divided but was to elect at large as a hitherto. The old Medicine Hat riding had been divided into two ridings, one with a population of 15,000 and the other with less than 4,000. Peace River had a population over 10,000 and had recently come solidly against the government, and while it was an enormous territory, it remained undivided, while in the south the riding of Clearwater had been carved out with a census population of 74 souls. These were not the only examples of the government's disregard for fairness and principle, but they were enough to show that the government was willing to stoop to the low tricks of "dirty" politics in order to force itself back to office and power.

Mr. Michener went on to show that in almost all manner of unfairness in the House and in the country, nevertheless the Conservative party had supported the legislation of the government with few exceptions, showing that they were more than merely an opposition, and were contributing to the needs of the province by criticizing and examining and supporting good legislation, even though introduced by a Liberal government.

Mr. Michener pointed out that the present government had no real conception of the needs of the country in the matter of roads and drainage. As more than half of those present at the convention were farmers, his remarks on this subject were listened to with interest and attention. He showed that while the government had in a measure at length accepted the gospel of good roads, it was proceeding to do so in a very haphazard manner. The Conservatives for years, and as set forth in the platform of the party since 1904, they had made their first great expenditure of a million dollars on the best road in the province, that from Athabasca Landing to the boundary, the road most travelled by automobiles, and had announced that it had been offered a strip from the old Stony Plain riding, where there are at present some hundreds of men engaged in railway construction work on the C.N.R. Mr. Michener charged the government with a deliberate machine trick to secure his defeat. The candidate announced that he had been offered a seat in one of the cities, which he had declined, preferring to be the member for Red Deer than to represent any other riding in the province. This statement was greeted with a round of cheers. ### A Noble Building

Citizens of Red Deer and newcomers, observing and enterprising westerners, have we not a few fine buildings on our main street? But lately on the north end you have noticed another just completed. There it stands, a solid building, concrete basement and solid brick above, crowned with graceful half pitch roof. You want to know something about it. Well, then, go inside and see. You gain the main entrance and see above you a title "St. Luke's Hall." Then you enter. First, perhaps, you go down to the basement. On right and left you enter spacious cloak rooms with laboratories attached. Beyond these you enter a fine main basement some 30 x 12 feet, and 12 feet high, and splendidly bright. Still further, and on the left you find steam furnace and fuel rooms; on the right splendidly equipped kitchen and dining room.

Mounting by a convenient back stair case, you reach a spacious platform some sixteen feet deep and thirty feet wide. This is fitted for concert, dramatic and oratorical uses. The main hall pleases your eye. It is spacious, lofty and beautifully fitted. The floor is best maple, above, the roof is supported by hammer beam trusses. At the far end you see a splendid gallery. Your trained eye says the hall is something like 75 feet long, and 30 wide from eye entrance to end of platform, and the gallery big enough to seat at least eighty people. In fact, about 400 people should be easily accommodated, very rightly surmise. There are still two other rooms at the west or entrance end. These rooms are living rooms. What's this? The building for? Well, it's a Parish Hall, and as such is for the benefit of the different organizations of St. Luke's Church, especially in social and educational movements. This is natural, since it is mainly due to the congregation of that church that this building was planned and completed. But the Building Committee gratefully acknowledges and warmly approves that many other citizens have given them. They wish and plan that the whole community should feel an attachment to the Hall, and they wish all to benefit by it. They strive to show at the opening of the Hall by giving a fine concert and dramatic sketch at a popular price. Space does not permit now to enlarge upon the full purposes of the Hall. Let time prove. Anyway the co-operation in building and opening the hall augurs well for the success of the venture. Leading far-seeing citizens have publicly stated that this building meets a long felt need in the town. That being the case, it will speak for itself before long. It can be rented out for various public functions, and prices can be obtained from the Secretary of the Board of Management.

OFFICIAL OPENING.

The official opening of the Parish Hall took place at two o'clock Monday afternoon. The chair was taken by Rev. C. W. G. Moore, rector of St. Luke's Church, while on the platform were His Worship the Mayor, E. Michener, M.P.P., F. S. Simpson, chairman of the School Board, R. H. Welliver, Capt. Cottingham, Contractor Miller, Committee man Halstead, and the wardens of the church, Messrs. J. A. Carswell and E. Wilson.

Short but crisp and congratulatory addresses were given by Mayor Galbraith and Messrs. Michener, Welliver, Simpson and Carswell after which a short prayer and the National Anthem closed proceedings, and the key of the hall given into the keeping of Capt. Cottingham.

THE SUPPER.

The supper in the evening was the most elaborate ever enjoyed in Red Deer, the ladies outdressed themselves, there being an abundance of almost everything in the edible line, and hundreds enjoyed the good things served up to them.

The sale of work of the ladies, and the candy stalls, fortune telling, etc., were all well patronized.

THE CONCERT.

The splendid hall was crowded to the doors to hear the concert later in the evening.

Those taking part in the program were Madame Hope, E. Brooks, E. G. Johns, Ed. Clarke, Madam Quigg, L. B. Griffith, and G. K. Johnston. The different numbers were well supported, and the encores were insisted on in every instance.

After the first part a musical sketch, entitled "An Evening in Harmony," written and composed by "It," was very cleverly put on by members of the Young Red Deer Theatrical Club, consisting of Mr. Kievel, C. Hamilton, R. E. Graham, H. Allen, Mrs. Samuels, Miss Koe, Miss Youmans, Miss Scouler, Miss Patterson and others, the actors all taking their parts to perfection. Miss breakfast and Mrs. Patterson sided at the piano during the evening.

Tuesday the ladies conducted a splendid sale of work and a ten cent tea, and on Tuesday evening a splendid dance was held in the hall by the young people, which was largely attended.

THE MARQUIS DE CALAIS

By LOUIS TRACY

A New and Exciting Love Story for Young and Old.

and was told, on inquiry, that it contained folios. By what folios? It was a country where men might still require an outrage by an appeal to the law of the jungle?

Hastily drawing from breast pocket the letter entrusted to him, he examined the superscription. It was addressed simply to the Marquis of Scarland, and must surely be a document of immense significance, or the young Viscount could not have brought him all the way from London to act as the squire rather than intrust it to the post. Each instant Dale's ideas became clearer; each instant his heart throbbed with a deeper anxiety.

At last, when the four-wheeled limousine appeared from sight round an angle of the rain-soaked boulevard, he yielded to impulse and ran into the street. French people are early risers, but the visitors to Calais that morning were late at an hour when most of the hotel staff were still sound asleep.

A night porter, however, was awaiting him at the entrance, and Dale forthwith engaged a cab and started on his way to the hotel. He was not alone, for a Frenchman, who had been waiting for him, was also waiting for him.

The Frenchman, of course, broke in a valuable statement of the situation to the demand, but the production of a British sovereign seemed to interrupt matters suitably, for because a bicycle was promptly produced from a shed in the rear of the building.

Dale handed the man the sovereign, jumped on the machine, and rode off rapidly in the direction of the hotel. He had no difficulty in turning the corner round which it had vanished, but a little farther on he erred in thinking that it had gone straight ahead, since the driver had really turned to the right again in order to keep clear of the front of the hotel.

Dale traveled at such a pace that the first long stretch of straight road opening up before his eyes convinced him of his blunder when no cab was in sight. He reined back, dismounted at the crossing, examined the road, and found that it had gone straight ahead, since the driver had really turned to the right again in order to keep clear of the front of the hotel.

The rain helped him wherever the roadway was unobstructed, but the paved routes, with which Calais abounds, offered difficulties that caused many minutes of delay. At last, he found himself in the open country, scorching along a sand road that traversed the low dunes lying between the town of Calais and Cap Gris Nez. It was not easy to see far ahead owing to the rain and mist, and he covered the ground more and more rapidly as he went on.

The horse was steaming as though it had been driven at a great pace, and the driver stood in the saddle, a cigarette, and protecting himself from the persistent downpour by an umbrella.

Dale soon reached the man, and said breathlessly in his slow French: "Where are the gentlemen?"

The man, who had evidently been paid to hold his horse, merely shrugged. Dale ran forward, laid a heavy hand on his shoulder, and said upon the other answered: "I don't know."

This, of course, was a lie, and the fact that it was a lie alarmed Dale as much as any of the sinister incidents which had already befallen him. For one thing, there was no house into which five men could have gone.

On each side of the road, and in the distance, to the right was the sea, gray and lowering beneath a leaden sky that seemed to weigh like a dead hand. Undoubtedly, was the cab, since Dale could swear to both horse and man. Where, then, was its occupants?

Having to depend upon his wife, he paid no further heed to the Frenchman, but, fancying her head in the front seat, he turned to the right, and moved forward on the right, or seaward, side of the road, and dragging the bicycle with him, he climbed to the top of the nearest dune, as he believed that a view of the sands could be obtained from that point. He was right. The sea was at a greater distance than he imagined would be the case, but a wide strip of firm sand, its wet patches glistening dully in the half-light, extended to the water's edge almost from the base of the hillock on which he stood.

At first, his anxious eyes strained through the haze in vain, until some circling seagulls caught his attention, and then he discerned some vague shapes in the distance. A brighter belt of the sea to the northeast.

Three of the figures were black and motionless, but the fourth gave an eerie suggestion of whiteness and movement. Abandoning the bicycle, and hardly realizing why he should be so perturbed, Dale ran forward. Twice he stumbled and fell amidst the stinging beach grass, but he was up again in a frenzy of effort, and now was near enough to the group of men to see that Medeham had Marigny barbed and in their shirt sleeves were fighting with swords.

Dale's eyes were now half-blinded with perspiration for he had ridden fast through the mud from Calais, and this final run through yielding sand and clinging sedges had made him feel as though he were walking on a sea of mud. He was not alone, for a Frenchman, who had been waiting for him, was also waiting for him.

The Frenchman, of course, broke in a valuable statement of the situation to the demand, but the production of a British sovereign seemed to interrupt matters suitably, for because a bicycle was promptly produced from a shed in the rear of the building.

He reined back, dismounted at the crossing, examined the road, and found that it had gone straight ahead, since the driver had really turned to the right again in order to keep clear of the front of the hotel.

At once Marigny struck with the deadly quickness and certainty of a cobra. His weapon pierced Medeham's breast high up on the right side. The stroke was so true and furious that the Englishman, already unbalanced, was driven on to his back on the sand. Marigny wheeled the blade free, and stooped with obvious intent to plunge it again through his opponent's body. A warning shout from each of the three spectators withheld him. He scowled vindictively, but dared not make a second mortal thrust. These French gentlemen whom he had summoned from Paris were bound by a rigid code of honor that would infamously have caused him to be branded as a murderer had he completed matters to his satisfaction. Nevertheless, he bent and peered closely into Medeham's face, gray now as the sand on which he was lying.

At facts through his own spectacles, failed to understand how an intelligent girl like his daughter could remain in constant association with Viscount Medeham for five days, and yet not discover his identity.

More than once, indeed, notwithstanding the caution exercised by the others—engaged now in a tacit conspiracy to dispel memories of a foolish entanglement from the girl's mind—the identification of Fitzroy with the Viscount troubling on the very lip of discovery. Thus, on Friday, when they had motored to Gramme, and had gathered before lunch in the lounge of the delightfully old-fashioned Rothay Hotel, Vanrenen happened to pick up an illustrated paper, containing a page of pictures of the Scarland short-horns.

Now, being a busy man, he gave little heed to the terminological confusions of names among the British aristocracy. He had not the slightest notion that the Marquis of Scarland's wife was Medeham's sister, and, with the quick interest of the Stock Exchange, he pointed out to Mrs. Leland an animal that resembled one of his own pedigree bulls, at present grazing fat on the Montargis ranch.

For the moment Mrs. Leland herself had forgotten the relationship between the two animals, and she said: "I met the Marquis last year at San Remo," she said hesitantly. "Any one could mistake a British peer for a commoner, but I thought he would get the better of it."

"I think it will serve," he muttered to himself. "May the devil take him, but I thought he would get the better of it!"

He turned away with an affection of coolness which he was far from feeling, while the doctor knelt to examine Medeham's injury. He saw someone running towards him, but believed it must be one of the witnesses, and his eyes fell to the stained blade in his hand.

"I rather forgot myself," he began. But the excuse was stopped short by a blow on the angle of the jaw that stretched him by Medeham's side and apparently as lifeless.

Assuredly, Dale was not versed in the punctilio of the duel, but he knew how and where to hit with a flat that would not stir, and his perturbed wife put weight and passion into that punch, and scarcely understood how effective it was. He found himself self-struggling in the grasp of two excited Frenchmen. He cursed both of them and Marigny fluently, and vowed the most horrible oaths in French, but soon calmed himself sufficiently to see that Count Edouard could not stir, and his perturbed wife sought to learn the extent of his master's injury. Still he swore at Marigny.

"Damn you!" he cried hoarsely, "you would have stabbed him if he was lying there if these pals of yours hadn't stopped you!"

At last recovering some degree of self-possession, he assisted the astounded and rather frightened Frenchmen to carry Medeham to the waiting carriage. One, who spoke English asked him to help in restoring the body of his master. The other, who he put weight and passion into that punch, and scarcely understood how effective it was. Still he swore at Marigny.

"Damn you!" he cried hoarsely, "you would have stabbed him if he was lying there if these pals of yours hadn't stopped you!"

At last recovering some degree of self-possession, he assisted the astounded and rather frightened Frenchmen to carry Medeham to the waiting carriage. One, who spoke English asked him to help in restoring the body of his master. The other, who he put weight and passion into that punch, and scarcely understood how effective it was. He found himself self-struggling in the grasp of two excited Frenchmen. He cursed both of them and Marigny fluently, and vowed the most horrible oaths in French, but soon calmed himself sufficiently to see that Count Edouard could not stir, and his perturbed wife sought to learn the extent of his master's injury. Still he swore at Marigny.

land by the afternoon service from the Gard du Nord, and was actually standing in the foyer of the hotel when Vanrenen entered with the others. As a result of this meeting, the journey to Paris arranged for Saturday was postponed till Sunday, and on this trivial base was decided to be built a very remarkable edifice, a chance that Mrs. Leland, too, decided to have a day in London, and she and Cynthia went out early. They returned to lunch at the hotel, and the girl, pleading lack of appetite, slipped out alone to buy a copy of Milton's poems. "For the book," she said, "I saw the book in the bookshop, she wandered into the Eubank Gardens."

The fine, though not bright, interval that had tempted her forth soon gave way to a gloomier hour, and she ran for shelter into the Charing Cross Station of the Metropolitan Railway.

I'm for Good Government

To the Editor of The News.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Can you help a good Conservative out in these times of stress? If so, I hope you will, for I have been reading the Advocate lately, and I am consequently feeling low and downhearted. You will probably say, serves me right for reading it, but you know it really is necessary to read the other side of the question, and so I turned to the Advocate, thinking it might be a wee bit better than the Albertan, but, no, I see it is tarred with the same brush. I noticed at once on getting a recent Advocate from the post office that it was a little heavier than usual, the cause being Dr. Clark's speech. The Advocate loves to print Dr. Clark's speeches.

I think this is the second one in about a couple of months. (I wonder how many subscribers read it). The Advocate used at one time to be pretty clean, but there is an election in the air now, and so it has to come out with the usual Grit dope, and talks round every question instead of about it, taking every opportunity to stab Mr. Michener in the back. It publishes a letter from "I'm for Red Deer."

"I'm for Ponoka" would be a more fitting non-de plume for that. Then he has another dig at the Conservative party over Hal Gaetz and the "Blind Guide," the two most public spirited citizens of Rocky Mountain House. Don't laugh, please. Then again we read "The Shoe on the Wrong Foot." It's really funny the way the Advocate puts the things about as long as Mr. Welliver's two henchmen who go about distributing the "Blind Guide" free of charge, taking care to place a few in the hands of Conservatives. It is not so long ago that one of these two professed to be a Conservative and whined about town of the Grits turning him down. Now he gets busy. Oh, yes, it's laughable. I should dearly like to see and hear "I'm for Red Deer" on the platform; he must be a gentleman. Let it me to be told that the people cannot get their rights because they are represented by a Conservative. Fancy a man of Mr. Michener's stamp soon being forgotten. Has "I'm for Red Deer" been talking to the farmers lately? Does he know that the government would rather defeat Mr. Michener than any other man in the province, and does he know why? Does he know that they already have enumerators out on the quiet, and that six leading Liberals, not ten miles from Red Deer, refused the enumerator's job, saying they had had enough of Sifton's hunch?

Has "I'm for Red Deer" brains enough to know that every town and district should get its own dues, irrespective of who the representative may be? Any one told by "such a forlorn hope" that as long as we send a Conservative representative we shall ask for bread and receive a stone? My advice, if I was in the Liberal ranks, would be to deport such supporters as "I'm for Red Deer." If the Advocate continues its present dope, we will be able to cut out the comic papers. I can stand some writers, but Oh, you "I'm for Red Deer." In conclusion, Mr. Editor, I see the Liberals are so sure of being returned that they have had to call in the aid of Thin Red Line Leech. Think of it, you conscientious Grits.

Yours truly,

PEOPLE'S RIGHTS.

The Western Hog

Dr. J. G. Rutherford says that of all the domestic animals the hog is by far the most generally profitable, and adds—"It is to be regretted that, in a country so well adapted to its requirements as are these Western Provinces, the supply is altogether inadequate to the demand. Of the hog products consumed in these provinces only a small fraction is of local origin, the great bulk being imported either from Eastern Canada or the United States. If packers and produce merchants can, after paying the price now ruling at all outside points of origin, plus the cost of transportation, sell pork and pork products at a profit, to the people and often to the farmers of the west, there must be an excellent opportunity to make money out of raising hogs for the home market. With the abundance of cheap feed always procurable in this country and the other favorable conditions, there is absolutely no reason why a single pound of pork or any other hog product should ever be brought outside.

All varieties of swine thrive and do well on the western farm. Settlers from Eastern Canada generally prefer the improved Yorkshire, the Tamworth or a cross between one of these breeds and the Berkshire. The packer as a rule prefers the long-sided bacon type, now generally bred in Ontario in response to his suggestions, but he cannot afford to be too particular and is glad to pay a good price for well finished hogs of any breed. The hog is known in Ireland as the gentleman who pays the rent, and while the farmer here is, as a rule, fortunate in having no rent to pay, he has sometimes other charges to provide for, in the liquidation of which the revenue from the pigpen might often be found useful.

Next ranking with its various ailments is one of the basic industries to every factory community. It leads in the establishment of various other industries dependent upon and related to it, and in that way promotes effectively diversified pursuits throughout Canada.

Do you Believe in going straight to the weak spot in treating disease? If so, you will never use anything but Peps for coughs, colds, bronchitis, and throat and lung troubles. Listen why! Peps are tiny tablets, which contain rich medicinal ingredients, so prepared that they turn into vapour in the mouth, and are breathed down to the throat, the breathing tubes and lungs direct.

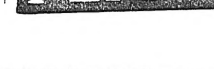

Cough mixtures go—not to the lungs and chest at all, but to the stomach. There is absolutely no direct connection between stomach and lungs. When you have a bad cold, your digestion is weakened. You lose appetite, and if a man, your usual smoke does not "taste good." In other words, your digestive system is lacking force. All cough mixtures make this condition worse.

Don't ruin your stomach to heal your lungs. Take a remedy that goes right to the spot—Peps.

Surprising how they end coughs, catarrh, bronchitis, sore-throat, "clergyman's throat," asthma, and all lung troubles. Contains no poison, and are best for children.

Dr. Gordon Stables says—"If you wish to ease and end a cough, if you desire to loosen tickling phlegm, clear the throat and the breathing tubes, use Peps. The pine fumes and balsamic fumes, so beneficial in throat and lung trouble, which are liberated when a Peps is put into the mouth, also serve another good purpose. They are strongly germicidal, and germs of disease in the mouth, on the palate, in the throat, and in the breathing tubes, are at once destroyed by their action."

Have you tried this famous remedy? If not, cut out this article, write across it the name of a friend, and mail it (with 1c stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A return trial packet will then be sent you. All drug stores and stores sell Peps also, but

New Zealand Sells Cheaper in Vancouver Than Ontario Does in Toronto—Interesting Comment of Trade Representative

The Toronto Globe and other advocates of reciprocity are being stripped of their former arguments by the trend of trade in a number of articles which were included in the proposed trade agreement of 1911. In its issue of January 15, the Globe displays the fact that New Zealand butter is selling cheaper in British Columbia than Ontario butter is selling in Toronto, and this with a duty on the New Zealand article. Those who opposed reciprocity can well afford to say "We told you so." With no duty on butter the imports would be greater, than ever, and would find their way to the prairie provinces and eastern Canada thus displacing the home product. Here is The Globe's report:

"The best New Zealand creamery butter is selling in Vancouver, British Columbia, at from 34 to 36 cents per pound.

"The best Ontario creamery butter is selling in Toronto at from 35 to 40 cents per pound.

"In view of the fact that this is the first year since Confederation in which practically no exports of Canadian butter have been made to Great Britain, and that Canada, once one of the principal sources of Britain's supplies, was compelled last year to go to the other end of the earth for supplies to feed her own people, the above observations, made to The Globe yesterday by Mr. J. Graham Gow, trade representative of the New Zealand Government, are of more than passing interest.

"Not only is New Zealand butter selling in Vancouver at the rate of three pounds for a dollar, which is much cheaper than Ontario butter is selling in Toronto, but it is accounted superior to Ontario butter, as indicated by higher price in the English market.

"Before the output of New Zealand churns was introduced to the people of British Columbia a year or two ago the sunset Province bought most of its butter in Ontario. Now Ontario dairymen cannot meet the prices of the New Zealanders in the British Columbia market, Mr. Gow said.

"When the New Zealand trade commission first went to Vancouver eighteen months ago the imports of butter from the antipodes amounted to 300,000 pounds. During 1912 they reached nearly 6,000,000 pounds."

CANADA WAS THE DUMPING GROUND FOR UNITED STATES STEEL PRODUCTS

General Manager Cantley of the Nova Scotia Steel Company on the Demand for More Adequate Duties

Just as agriculture is the basis of all industry so is iron and steel the foundation of most manufacturing enterprise. This makes the following statement by Mr. Thomas Cantley, general manager of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal company of great importance to all concerned in the industrial welfare of the country:

"The conditions incident to the steel business of Canada, during the first three-quarters of the year were unique. The demand for, and consumption of steel in connection with the railway and engineering work of the country were larger than ever before in our history. The iron, steel and engineering trades of Great Britain, Germany, and Belgium, were in a highly prosperous condition, and prices in those markets continued to advance throughout the whole of the year. In view of these conditions, it would be reasonable to suppose that very satisfactory prices would have been obtained by the Canadian steel producers. That such was not the case, was entirely due to the condition of trade in the United States, and the policy adopted by the steel manufacturers of that country, who, during the last half of the year, made desperate efforts to dispose of as large a proportion of their produce as possible, in Canada, quite irrespective of profit or even cost of production.

Sold at a Sacrifice
"That Canada was thus utilized as the dumping market for the United States, is evident from the fact that of the entire export of pig-iron by the United States, during the past year, ninety per cent. of it was thrown into Canada, while an enormous tonnage of finished steel products was also disposed of in the same market, at prices in some instances more than twenty-five per cent. below the figures at which they were selling raw pig-iron in their own market five years previously. During the latter summer months, there was some slackening up in the mad scramble by American mills to sell, and by October Canadian consumers, who had previously contracted in the United States, found it difficult to get deliveries of their material. Later, when they were willing to pay premiums of several dollars a ton, for prompt delivery, they found that even with this gain they were still unable to get material for weeks after the contract-delivery period, with the result that a large amount of structural work was delayed, with consequent serious loss to the interests affected. Following these conditions, prices improved materially, and the last quarter of the year shows marked increases in all departments.

Greatly Increased Demand

"The home demand for steel railway, construction, car building, structural and manufacturing purposes was very large, and a study of the trade reports shows that the consumption for the first half year was over thirty per cent. greater than for the corresponding period of 1911, while the home production of iron and steel was probably in the vicinity of from fifteen to seventeen per cent. greater than that of the previous year. When the final tonnage-statistics for the calendar year of 1912 are compiled, they will probably show that whereas the country's production of steel increased at the rate of fifteen to twenty per cent. Canada's demands increased at a much greater ratio.

"In order that Canada's iron and steel producing capacity should more nearly keep pace with the consumption and requirements of the country, it is necessary that there should be at once a readjustment of the Canadian metal tariff. How inadequate the present tariff conditions are to enable our domestic producers to meet their largely increased labor, assembly and distribution, costs as compared with those of foreign competitors is abundantly evident from a very cursory examination of the question.

On the Free List

"Recent quotations of foundry brands of Scotch and English pig-iron are as follows: Cleveland pig-iron, 85 to 86; Somerset, 82; Coltness, 96 1/2. The present Canadian duties on these brands of pig-iron work out at less than 10 per cent., 8 per cent., and 7 per cent. respectively on the three brands named. In the case of steel billets and other forms of semi-finished steel, the conditions are even worse, recent quotations of mild steel billets being £6 10s a ton. The Canadian duty works out at about 9 per cent., while, in a few cases of the more highly finished rolling mill products supplied by the United Kingdom, the Continent, and the United States, the greatest amount of protection ranges about 20 per cent. While on another very important item, namely, wire-rods, which comprise a very material proportion of the entire output of the largest steel plant in Canada, no protection whatever is afforded, wire-rods being on the free list."

"I DO not know much about the tariff, but I do know this much: when we buy goods abroad, we get the goods and the foreigner gets the money; when we buy goods made at home, we get both the goods and the money."

—Abraham Lincoln.

Conservative Has Majority of 607 in Perth Election.

Perth, Ont., March 26.—With one poll to hear from, John C. Ebbs, Conservative, had a majority of 607 over David McLean, Liberal, in the contest for the vacancy in the legislature, caused by the death of Hon. Col. Matheson, who represented South Lanark for many years. Polling took place Wednesday, and an exceptionally large vote was recorded.

Interest in the contest was great and the Liberal leader, H. W. Rowell, addressed a meeting in support of Mr. McLean at Smith's Falls, Monday night. He was followed by Hon. J. W. Hanna, provincial secretary. The town of Smith's Falls gave Mr. Ebbs a majority of 500. Mr. Ebbs is a prominent farmer of Drummond township.

Changes in Judiciary of Alberta Announced

A number of judicial appointments for the district court of Alberta have just been made. Judge Crawford, of Macleod, has been appointed junior judge at Edmonton, and is succeeded at Macleod by Edward P. McNeil, of Oklaheod. Judge Winter, of Lethbridge, goes to Calgary as junior judge to Judge A. A. Carpenter, and is succeeded at Lethbridge by John A. Jackson, of Ponoka.

Marrianne

That concert, dance and box social at Marrianne is going to be a great affair, but it is not going to take place on the 2nd of April as previously announced, that date having been changed to Wednesday, April 10th. Ladies are requested to bring well filled boxes and gentlemen well filled pockets. Some of the best talent of the West will be present on this occasion, and no effort will be spared to make this the most splendid, up-to-date style of thing.

A strong effort is being made to advance the cause of Conservatism in the Evans district, and with this in view a Conservative Association is about to be formed. This is as it ought to be, for there is a total lack of organization on the part of the party in this district, and if the party do not hurry up, this will make itself felt on the occasion of forthcoming election.

The heavy snow fall has provided sleighing in this district, of which full advantage has been taken. Our game warden, Mr. Dick Bley, J.P., reports the arrival of the robin, that sure harbinger of spring. Still another party, this time at Mr. D. Learned's, Marrianne is certainly going strong on jollifications.

Penhold Union U.F.A. No. 13

A well attended meeting of the above Union was held in Penhold school house on Saturday, March 15. The Secretary reported on having handled two cars of coal for the Union, which appeared to have been very satisfactory.

It was decided to accept Brown Bros. offer to supply formalin at 20c per lb., that supplied by them last year having been of good quality. The question of ordering flour came up, and the Secretary was instructed to order 20 sacks from Strome Milling Co., Strome, Alta., as a trial of quality. The meeting unanimously agreed to co-operate with the Penhold Board of Trade in every way possible to secure better roads into Penhold and better shipping facilities for the C. P. R.

It was moved and carried unanimously that the Secretary be paid a yearly salary of $50.00. The meeting then adjourned to Saturday, April 19th, when a good turnout of members and friends is requested.

A. SPEAKMAN, Secretary.

New Regulations Governing the Free Entry of Pure Bred Animals

On the first of April this year there will come into force new regulations governing the free entry to Canada of animals for the improvement of stock. To this end the following amended regulations have been adopted by Order in Council for the guidance of importers and Custom House officers.

1. No animal imported for the improvement of stock shall be submitted free of duty unless the owner is a British subject, resident in the British Empire, or if more than one owner, each is a British subject resident in the British Empire, and there is furnished an import certificate stating that the animal is recorded in a Canadian National Record or in a Foreign Record recognized as reliable by the National Record Committee.

A statutory declaration by the owner or one of the owners, that he is a British subject, or that each is a British subject, resident in the British Empire, and that such animal is the identical animal described in such certificate, must be provided, and that such animal is being imported into Canada for the improvement of stock.

2. In case such certificate is not at hand at the time of the arrival of the animal, entry for duty may be accepted, subject to refund of duty upon the production of the requisite certificates and proofs in due form, satisfactory to the collector, within one year from the time of entry.

3. The form of certificate to be accepted for the free importation of animals for the improvement of stock, and the customs procedure in connection therewith shall be subject to the direction of the Minister of Customs.

4. The above declarations shall be attached to the free import entry, and may be made before the collector, surveyor or chief clerk at the port where the goods are entered or before any functionary authorized by law to administer oaths.

Under the old regulations a British subject residing in a foreign country, or the citizen of another country living in Canada, could secure the free entry of properly registered animals, whereas under the new order foreign persons or firms are excluded from this privilege.

Customs officers are required to examine carefully the animals presented for entry to see that they correspond with the description contained in the import certificate, and if they do not, duty is collected. The statutory declarations required regarding citizenship and identity will it is hoped effectively prevent abuses that led up to the passage of the new regulations.

As in the past, animals are subjected to veterinary inspection at the port of entry. Officials of the Health of Animals who do this work are required to make a report as to color and markings. If it is found by the Canadian National Records that foreign certificates of registration do not correspond with these reports, Canadian registration and import certificates for the animals in question are refused.

Ontario Bars Will Remain
Toronto, Ont., March 26.—The Ontario bar will not be abolished. The local option law will remain in force because it is considered to be just legislation. The government from time to time, when it thought advisable, will enact further restrictions on the traffic to minimize the evils.

By a straight party vote, N. W. Rowell's abolition-the-bar motion was defeated in the legislature. The above is the government's policy. The long debate on the temperance issue was wound up by Sir James Whitney, and the leader of the opposition, and the points brought out by both speakers were in no wise new. The house divided on the amendment by T. H. Lennox, Conservative, for New York. The government amendments were carried by 75 to 17. Allan Studholme, Labor member for East Hamilton, voted with the opposition.

With him this season Mr. Eckhardt brings a very stock organization, including Mr. Wm. Yandell, Mr. Gerald Pring, late of the Constance Crawley company. During a recent visit to New York, Mr. Eckhardt secured the Canadian rights to some of the most recent dramatic successes; two of them he will present during his engagement here, "Bought and Paid For" and "Way Down East." Neither of these bills need any comment. The former is considered Geo. Broadhurst's greatest production, and the latter is from the pen of Lottie Elphinstone. Seats now on sale at Gaetz-Cornett Drug Store.

In the midst of the excitement of the millinery openings last week, the Day Hardware Co. decided that they would also hold one and the designs and shapes displayed in their window were marvelous. A carpenter's tool kit, fashioned in fascinating lines, with a couple of dusters jauntily set in the back, and a screwdriver stuck through the centre, made a hat worth, for size and style, has never before been equalled in Red Deer.

Put a la Gracie was another prominent style. This was a drooping design, coming low over the head and partly covering the face, being prettily trimmed with a light shade of quarter-inch rope, gathered into tassels at the ends. Clothes pins neatly set in the rim, and a trimming of lampwick, made an original and pleasing hat of an ordinary pie tin.

There were some other styles, but not being conversant with the millinery business, we will not attempt to describe them. However, we would advise the ladies to look these over before deciding on their style for this season.

Sergeant—At Arms—G. Keivell.

High School At Home

The teaching staff and High School pupils held their annual Easter At Home in the assembly hall of the school on Thursday last, when about one hundred gathered to enjoy the evening.

The programme was arranged and put on by the President, Mrs. Myrtle Smith, and Lowell Doughty, with Harry Evans as announcer. The great success of the At Home ought to be a great argument in favor of women's suffrage. A "Trip Around the World" was especially interesting, and the artist who drew the pictures must be congratulated. The orchestra gave a very fine rendition, and Mrs. Quigley sang an Italian air, which was deservedly encored. After supper there was another half hour's enjoyment, and then the party broke up with regret, singing Auld Lang Syne.

ENGINEER J. W. McLEOD KILLED

Fatal Accident at Martin McDougall's Saw Mill

Shortly after starting work at the saw mill of Martin & McDougall, fourteen miles north of Leslieville, Thursday last, Engineer J. W. McLeod became entangled in the belt of the large wheel and was whirled to death.

It appears that the belt came off, and Mr. McLeod may have tried to put it on with his foot, as his leg was caught, and he was whirled around and dashed to the floor, death ensuing through a fractured skull. His left leg was almost torn from the body and the bone was broken in several places. It was all done in a second of time, and he only lived about an hour and a half without regaining consciousness.

Coroner Dr. Henry George, of Red Deer, was sent for, and made an investigation, but the cause of death was so apparent that he did not deem an inquest necessary, and no one could possibly be to blame but himself.

About four years ago deceased lost his wife. Shortly afterwards his little four-year-old daughter died in the house. Through a son, near Bentley, of sunstroke, while working in the field. He leaves a family of small children and a daughter seventeen years old. The family are being looked after by his friends.
